Chapter 1 by Grace1517

"Stop bugging me!" I screamed

She backed up, turned and sprinted out of the room.

I ruffled my hair, my little sister was being so obnoxious. I was trying to have a normal conversation with my boyfriend on Skype.

Chapter 2 by SaintSayaka

When she turned up in that ditch a week later, I was sworn to secrecy by Josh. He assured me that night on the other line that everything would be fine.

"That's not your sister," he kept repeating, thousands of miles away but still so close, "that's not your sister."

He promised me everything. A house for the two of us. Money. Security. Why did it have to end with my sister's death? I found a few of those things in this cell, but my sister certainly isn't one of them.

Josh had always been different. It's what brought us together to begin with. He wore shirts decorated with demons and sharpies, and I wore floral print. We clashed in nothing but our tastes. In other words, it was the perfect high school relationship.

But things changed when he moved.
